NCDSB prepares for a strong start in school leadership for September

The Northeastern Catholic District School Board is pleased to announce that Lori Hurtubise has been appointed to the position of Principal at English Catholic Central School, New Liskeard. Currently a Special Assignment Teacher for the Board, Mrs. Hurtubise will begin her new role as of September 2007.

Mrs. Hurtubise brings over eleven years of teaching experience in the primary and junior grades. Since 2005, she has worked as Special Assignment Teacher – Student Achievement for the Board. She obtained her Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Education, Primary and Junior Division from Queen's University. Mrs. Hurtubise's further qualifications include Reading Specialist, Intermediate and Senior Qualifications and Religious Education Specialist.

Lori Hurtubise's personal philosophy of education states, "I think that those of us who have experienced the call to teach often hold very similar views. We believe in the unique potential of every child and strive for ways to show them how they can indeed succeed. We provide supportive, inclusive, social learning environments. We model creativity, Catholicity, motivation and enthusiasm. We show respect for diversity, and provide purposeful and engaging learning activities. We reflect on our teaching practice and continue to challenge ourselves professionally."

"Lori's experience as a classroom teacher, her leadership in the position of Special Assignment Teacher, and her natural capacity as a strong instructional leader and her understanding and deep appreciation for the spiritual underpinnings of Catholic education will serve her well as she leads and guides the students and staff of English Catholic Central School," added Karen Rowe, Superintendent of Education, NCDSB. We are looking forward to supporting her in her new position."
